

Coronavirus: biological war or “natural” disease?

By Carlos Santamaría.

The US is using any mechanism, including biological weapons, to sink its rivals like China and thus emerge unscathed from the conflicts it is immersed in.

“Neither a man, nor a multitude, nor a nation can be trusted to act humanely or think sensibly under the influence of great fear.”

Bertrand Russell

This is one of the most complete documents in America on the aforementioned phenomenon, uniting political, medical, social, economic, human, and military categories, with reserved information, since the vast majority of media have focused significantly on health (data, threats, and prevention), although without investigating its probable artificial origin, who actually benefits, the damage to mental or economic health, collective hysteria, and the present future of this pandemic.

Thus, it is necessary to briefly describe these aspects that allow us to understand this phenomenon in a more comprehensive way.

1. Biological warfare.

Currently, one of the fields where attempts are being made to obtain hegemonic supremacy in the world escapes all ethical doctrines and corresponds to biological warfare.

In this sense, the world power that invests the highest sum of its annual budget to finance scientific programs that investigate pathogenic agents that can be used as biological weapons is the United States, constantly experimenting in nations among which Cuba stands out, being the object of multiple artificially provoked epidemics.

It is worth noting, in this specific case, that in Wuhan there is one of the most sophisticated biological laboratories of the highest biosafety level 4, Wuhan BSL-4, belonging to the Wuhan Institute of Virology, which experiments with biological agents that represent a high individual risk of contagion.

This laboratory works with the most dangerous pathogens in the world, including several coronaviruses, such as SARS-CoV (Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome), MERS-CoV (Middle East Respiratory Syndrome) and many other types of viruses under the supervision not only of the Chinese government but of the WHO itself, with the participation of virologists from the USA, Canada and the United Kingdom.

The transfer of the 2019-nCoV 2015 patent from the US Department of Justice to the Wuhan BSL-4 laboratory, confirming that the 2019-nCoV coronavirus was first known in 1965, not only authorized Chinese scientists to research this pathogen that could mutate during experiments. In 2018, in southern China, virologists discovered 89 new coronaviruses originating from bats, according to the American Journal of Virology (June 13, 2018), which had the same receptor as MERS-CoV, research funded by both the Chinese Ministry of Science and Technology and USAID (CIA) and the US National Institute of Health, which has always shared information on advances in research on infectious diseases and biological weapons with the Pentagon, aggravated by cooperation in the development of killer insects to carry genetically modified viruses and insert them into three types of insects: fleas, cicadas and aleurodids (1).

The above opens the possibility of deliberate leaking of 2019-nCoV or by carelessness of Chinese or Western virologists.

2. The economic effect.

The coincidence between the media campaign warning of a deadly disease in China and the extraordinary decrease in demand for oriental products must urgently be analyzed.

As is known, the rivalry between the USA and China for the world market, the huge debt of the former with the latter, the great acceptance of Chinese products in Latin America despite extraordinary propaganda against them, have relocated the powers which has harmed the trade of the North American nation.

Now that the dollar has shot up in an extreme and artificial way, it is not unreasonable to think of this virus as a sharp sword, a trend that is confirmed when the US Secretary of Commerce, in a defiant manner, stated on Fox News that the disease could help the America First agenda by affecting China economically, returning employment to its country.

It is worth highlighting the “generosity” of the European Union who will mobilize 25 billion euros to face the crisis from Covid-19, although to save the Banks (2008) it issued 2 billion euros.

3. The political and military intention.

Currently, the countless conflicts that the US faces in North Korea, Syria, Iraq, Afghanistan, Russia, China, Venezuela, Iran, Yemen, Libya, Ukraine, Palestine, among others, force it to create new ways out of these swamps such as new war mechanisms in space, weapons of mass destruction, espionage, blackmail and biological warfare. For this compelling reason, it would not be surprising to sow a virus of such magnitude through its associates in the very center of its opponent's commercial and military activity (2).

4. The Media Effect.

Regarding the origin of the coronavirus, the immense diffusion of the belief that it was infected in a market for exotic seafood or animal products was rejected by the World Health Organization (WHO) and now many internationally renowned scientists have launched the idea that the virus was the result of bioengineering. Francis Boyle of the University of Illinois has determined that “2019 Wuhan Coronavirus is an offensive biological warfare weapon (and) the World Health Organization knows perfectly well what is going on in Wuhan,” confirmed because the globalized media ignored this information and that of a US biotechnology company, Moderna Inc. (Norwood, Massachusetts), sending the first batch of its coronavirus vaccine, called mRNA-1273, to the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) for researchers to carry out the first tests on humans.

Global Research has maintained that this virus maintains unique characteristics and is very similar to the SARS and MERS epidemics, and “has genetic material never before identified and is not linked to any known animal or human virus.”

In short, the persistent campaign organized through a sustained media campaign by intelligence agencies that manipulate the three major companies that control the global information market (AP, Reuters, France Press), has also achieved a triple effect: believing that China is the cause of the disease so that, in addition to blaming it, its economy collapses; making people believe that all of humanity is in danger of disappearing and hiding the social scientific analysis of the phenomenon.

5. Medical science.

The coronavirus belongs to an extensive family of viruses that affect humans and several species of animals. Until now there were six known viruses that could make a person sick, of which four cause the common cold, including severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS), which hit China in 2002, and Middle East respiratory syndrome (MERS), which appeared in 2012 in Saudi Arabia. Research carried out at the time indicated that the origin of both respiratory syndromes is in bats and this has been an important element that is also considered for the new coronavirus called COVID-19.

In this regard, the work of the Nariño scientist Fabio Arévalo provides a clear and supported synopsis of the phenomenon in question and the necessary prevention against this scourge (3).

6. Human goodness and evil.

Humanology as a scientific discipline has established very precise parameters regarding destructive or proactive behavior.

The plutocratic world elites act differently from ordinary people since their profit mentality obscures moral principles and, therefore, they do not hesitate to kill, deceive, silence, destroy, sicken those who oppose their designs.

The above validates the thesis that it is possible to devise any mechanism to sink the competitor regardless of the number of victims or families destroyed, as occurred with the Iraq war with more than one and a half million dead, for no reason other than ambition. Therefore, the evil spirit exists and is the source of situations such as biological warfare.

Conclusions.

From the coherent unity of the sections used, all with proven information, two basic hypotheses arise about the origin of the Coronavirus and therefore its resolution: one, from medical science as a disease that is born from bats or mutations, which would have no cure at this time, except prevention and treatments. The second, its birth is from the network that is woven in the darkest biological warfare laboratories, causing experimentation and deaths everywhere, especially in countries that contradict the capitalist consumerist model, although total control of these weapons is impossible, affecting them themselves.

The sudden thing (and it can be given as a prediction) would be that the pandemic would soon subside and remain as an alert that produced results basically unrelated to health.

Perhaps this is the new opportunity for the ruling classes of the powers and other countries involved in biological warfare to understand the damage they can cause to humanity and that their application can extinguish life definitively. Today, prevention based on generosity and kindness is the human obligation present in this urgent research task.
